

The Pig Story...or the story of Pig-Headedness

One day, a woman was driving down a treacherously curved road. While approaching an especially threatening curve, a large truck approached her in the opposite lane. While passing her, the truck driver leaned out his window and yelled Pig! Pig! The woman immediately took offense as she presumed to know why the truck driver had yelled.

She turned from the truck just in time to see herself smashing into a pig in the middle of the road!

The point is, as Albert Einstein said, "Your current state of mind brought you where you are now." If you plan to improve your life or your health you must change roads, or at least change lanes. Drop any assumptions.

"You cannot correct a problem at the same level of thinking you were at when you created the problem."

Every day, somebody will visit their doctor whose advice they were following for years, and he will tell them he's afraid they have Cancer or some serious illness. Rather than questioning the intelligence of following this advice right into the early grave, they will ask, "What do you recommend I do?"?????

We spend more money and more technology than ever before in healthcare, yet we are the sickest and most unhappy we have ever been. Yet we continue to follow the same course of treatments, only changing in order to take even more drugs or make use of even more technology. ??????

NATURAL CHIROPRACTIC IS A SAFE, SANE ALTERNATIVE.
